

Aloha New York!

By Kaleo Eldredge

It's not easy coming to New York from Hawaii because it's so far away! To ease my transition and make New York feel a little more like home, there are a few reminders I brought here from Hawaii!

The first thing I'll mention are my family pictures. I brought these pictures because they remind me of home and that no matter where I go, they are always close to my heart :). By bringing these pictures, in some weird way, I brought my family.

The second thing I brought here from Hawaii is my ukulele. It's a musical instrument that kinda resembles a guitar. I brought this so that whenever I get bored I can sit around and play for my teammates or myself. I like to play local Hawaiian songs, but mostly play slow songs.

The last thing I brought with me from Hawaii is all my Hawaiian clothing! These clothes come from Maui, a place in Hawaii I absolutely love! I brought them because the clothes are both original and are made with cool designs. I also like to show my Hawaiian pride!! Since I couldn't spend my summer on the islands, I brought a little part of the island with me!
